Computer Science and Intelligent Systems Program

You will obtain an education and participate in advanced technology research that ranges from the basics of information science to application of information/intelligence engineering. In addition, you will learn the latest technology and its applications as related to the programming techniques and software development techniques that form the basis of ICT. This includes computer theories and design capacities; support for the information society such as the Internet and security; and multimedia and knowledge processing to effectively use big data.